There are also occasional supplements for what Japanese and/or American companies are planning or doing in Communist countries and in the Middle East. This is written in Washington from original Japanese sources --newspapers, trade journals, etc. (Nos. 109 - 115)

2. Publications

(See preface to answer to Question 11, Section 2 (Publications and Research) in Supplemental Statement for period ending June 30, 1971.)

Japan's Changing Political Economy, 1978, edited by Edward J. Lincoln

On March 24, 1978 the East Asian Institute of Columbia University hosted a conference entitled "Japan's Changing Political Economy", funded by the United States-Japan Trade Council, as part of the endeavor to increase understanding of Japan. Robert S. Ingersoll, former Ambassador to Japan, chaired the panel sessions composed of the leading academic experts on Japan.

In order to bring the substance of these discussions to a wider audience, 2,000 copies of this edited version of the conference were distributed to the American news media and leading opinion makers in government and business.

U.S.-Japan Agricultural Trade: The Pacific Lifeline

This agricultural pamphlet, subtitled "How Do You Benefit" analyzes the benefits to the American farmer and consumer accruing from farm exports to Japan. It examines the mutual benefits of current U.S. agricultural exports to Japan in terms of American jobs, buying power of the dollar, and the many business and personal relationships which have developed through this trade.

The pamphlet was prepared for the Council by Donald Lerch and Company, and circulated to a mailing list of 10,000, including all major farm organizations and their membership, major media and leading opinion makers in government and agribusiness.

Japan's Tariff and Nontariff Barriers: The Perception Gap

This pamphlet, written by Eugene J. Kaplan, Consulting Economist, reviews current tariff and nontariff barriers in Japan in detail. He draws the conclusion that, while there are still impediments to international trade in Japan, their influence and extent are vastly overestimated. Six thousand copies of this pamphlet were distributed to public officials, newspapers, administrative officials, subscribers, and Japanese Consulates in Washington and each state.

Yearbook of U.S.-Japan Economic Relations, 1978

This Yearbook, compiled and published by the U.S.-Japan Trade Council, provides an account of events affecting U.S.-Japan economic relations during 1978. It contains extensive analysis, graphs and statistics on pertinent bilateral and multilateral economic issues. Approximately 5,000 copies have been distributed to libraries, public officials, news media, subscribers and academic communities in Washington and each state.
